

HATE PROPAGANDA LEADING US INTO WAR--DR. BRADLEY

Without Renaissance Boys Will Be In Uniforms
In Ten Years.

LECTURE GIVEN BY FAMOUS MINISTER

This Is Era Of Individual Thinking, He Tells Big Audience.

"America never had as much vicious propaganda as we have today. There is more propaganda of hate which is always the forerunner of war, than we have ever had in our history. Unless there is a renaissance, in 10 years from today every boy 11 years old in Salem will be in uniform."

This was the message brought to a large audience at the First Methodist church Thursday evening, by Dr. Preston Bradley, pastor of the Peoples church of Chicago and one of the best known lecturers of the Redpath circuit.

Dr. Bradley delivered a masterful address. He held his audience from start to finish with the force of his timely message and caused gales of laughter with his humorous comments on subjects of the day.

Dr. Bracey spoke on "The United States of Tomorrow" and warned his hearers of the dire catastrophe that is to come unless there is a change in present policies, both individual and national. He warned against the program of propaganda that is being used to drag the United States into

"They want you to forget the law war while they are getting our boys ready for the next one. They are appealing to the racial hatreds and the things which should never be used to separate men," said Dr. Bradley.

"This is an era of individualism. The minds of men are now at work on the problems of life and government. No longer does the amateur reformer, the pseudo leader of the fanatic have the responsibility of leadership. Today the truth is an impersonal force.

Defect In Religion

"The truthseeker of history are fe because most of us do not want pay the price, we want to be comfortable in our religion. There is some defect in our religion if it cannot star the light of all ages. It is only who have our hearts and uncon-

the economic life of Europe collapse if Bolshevism extends through Russia through Germany, through France, England and Italy, I say to you that the United States cannot escape from it too. If Europe goes to pieces, Germany will help America.

The only way American can cover the supremacy of the economic world is for peace in Europe, and will only be the ideals of America that can ever get peace in Europe. The world condition is one great upheaval now in its renaissance about its future. The people of today are int

Physical Improvement.

ONE of the most comprehensive studies of school children ever undertaken in the United States to determine the relation between physical improvement and mental progress is now under way.

Thirty-five hundred pupils in widely different districts of the city chosen are in the experimental squads. The first step is a minute physical and mental examination to determine as fully as possible their present status of bodily and mental development.

These examinations are to be followed by health campaigns of various kinds especially designed for the elimination of the physical defects. The progress of the child in his studies will be carefully tabulated for comparison with the health chart.

Among other points it is hoped to determine at what age children attain their full physical growth, the effect of physical condition on intelligence and, if a child's weight can be increased by diet, what can be done to increase his stature if he is stunted.

The effort to find the answer to this last problem is one of the most spectacular features of the undertaking.

Out of the mass of evidence obtained

it is hoped to reach better general standards for the health and education of all children. It is hoped also that better standards for the framing of child labor legislation will result.

Every such move is good, but this one particularly so because of its scope. It is only by continuous experiment that a sufficiently flexible code for giving every child an equal chance with his companions can be devised.

The House Shortage

SALEM'S need of more homes was pointed out by a speaker at the last monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce. Salem's position in this matter is not unique. Other industrial centers are finding themselves in some need of more rentable homes, and everywhere as here the chief obstacle in the way of erecting new houses seems to be the present high cost of building materials.

Those who invested their money in houses during the period of prosperity four years ago have by no means reaped the returns they expected. In many cases they lost money, and they are extremely hesitant about risking further losses by building houses which when rented may fail to bring in a reasonable rate of interest on the investment.

Yet we must have homes, and there seems to be one solution of the housing problem locally. Owners of houses not now occupied could borrow from banks enough money to put them in shape to be rented and if the houses were of sufficient size they could be remodeled to provide two apartments in place of one. This will provide a temporary if not a permanent solution of a problem which stands as a serious obstacle to the expansion of Salem and many other cities.

Months have passed before the solution of Salem's water problem seemed to be in sight, and while the securing of a better and more adequate water supply may be Salem's most pressing need, there are other problems to be considered, and we should take some action now to relieve the housing shortage.

LAST ANALYSIS OF SUCCESS

Some Worth-While Thoughts That It May Pay the Busy Man to Ponder Over.

It isn't success if it costs you the companionship and chumminess and love of your children. Very often busy, wealthy men of momentous affairs discover too late that they have sacrificed the finest thing in life, the affection of their family. Let me relate an incident recently told me which contains a priceless suggestion for many ultra-busy business men. A prominent public utility executive of Illinois told a friend that he was going to give his young son an unusual Christmas present. "I'm going," he said, "to write my boy a letter telling him that, as a Christmas present, I'm going to give him an hour of my time every day." He added that he had been doing a lot of thinking on the subject, and felt that he owed this to his son.

Alas, he died two weeks later. I work at least an average of twelve hours a day, but I never fail to find time to romp with my little fellows or to tell them stories—"grand new ones"—after they are ready for bed. I wouldn't forego this pleasure for the sake of any amount of money. Wealth is an excellent thing to possess if earned honestly and utilized sensibly. But wealth won at the expense of health or family affection isn't wealth, but poverty, poverty of heart, poverty of soul.—Baltimore American.

DADDY WAS NOT CONCERNED

Information Must Have Been of Considerable Importance to Woman Who Was Returning Home.

The woman was evidently returning from a trip away from home. When she came into the waiting room at the station three youngsters swooped down upon her and all but smothered her with hugs and kisses.

"My, I'm glad to get home!" the mother exclaimed. "And how is Harry?" she asked.

"Oh, Harry did just fine while you were gone!" Virginia put in. "He didn't tease me a bit, and he helped with the work, and he took his music lesson, and he practiced every day, and—and everything."

"That was fine, Harry!" mother praised. "And you, Virginia; how did you do?"

Of course it was up to Harry to do his part here.

"Say, mamma, Virginia's a brick!" he exclaimed. "She can cook 'most as good as you can, and sweep—say, mamma, you ought to see her sweep!"

"Well, I'm certainly glad to hear that," mother told them. "And little Rosemary, of course she was all right—but how mamma did miss her!"

"I helped Virginia cook!" Rosemary told her mamma, with evident pride. "Well, you all did just fine; I can see that," mother repeated. "And, now, what about daddy? You haven't told me a thing about him!"

"Oh, daddy's all right," Harry assured her. "Why only last night dad said you needn't come back for three months as far as he was concerned."

WOMEN SHOULD ACT QUICKLY

When a woman finds herself afflicted with backache, headache, nervousness, dragging down pains, pain in her side, irregularities and irritability, dark circles appear under the eyes and her complexion gets sallow, she may be sure the underlying cause is some ailment peculiar to her sex. Such women should act quickly and take the great American remedy for such conditions, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they may be saved years of suffering. For generations this old fashioned root and herb medicine has been restoring ailing women to health, and it may be relied upon with perfect confidence.

Town of the Vikings Unearthed.

The discovery near Gothenburg, Sweden, of ruins of Ganda Lodose, and Nya Lodose, two ancient seaports of the Vikings, is considered one of the most important of its kind in north Europe during recent years. The find uncovers the seats of learning and of trade of the Norsemen during the Middle Ages. Gamla Lodose has been completely excavated and discoveries of the life of the Vikings are being unearthed rapidly as the excavation of Nya Lodose also nears completion. Among the interesting remains found are a great church with several smaller churches, city walls, a castle, houses, armor, tools, weapons and coins, with other relics which throw much light upon the culture and early history of Scandinavia.

Berlin Would Settle On Reparations Basis

London, March 30.—Despite the denial issued in Washington, it was persistently reported in German diplomatic sources today that Berlin has sent a memorandum to Great Britain and the United States stating the Germans are willing to settle the Ruhr issue upon the basis of reparations, leaving final adjustment of the amount of reparations to an international commission.

Takes Drink, Says Nothing Is Wrong With City Water

The quality of Salem's water supply is the subject of considerable comment among traveling salesmen who include this city on their regular route.

This was demonstrated Thursday morning at city hall when a member of the traveling fraternity declared that he had not until that time taken one drink of water since he had been in the city.

His reason was because of the fact that other salesmen who visit here have passed the word along to "be aware of drinking water in Salem." They are of the opinion that the water here is unfit for use by reason of the typhoid fever epidemic three years ago.

He was convinced that his information was wrong and after being persuaded to try a drink of city water, declared he "could see nothing wrong with that." He appeared relieved by the thought that he could safely drink city water on subsequent visits to Salem.

A Prescription for High Blood Pressure

Used by Buffalo Physician for Many Years With Great Success

Since the beginning of the year druggists of the better class have been selling a vegetable preparation called NORMA, a very successful remedy for reducing high blood pressure to normal.

People who have no appetite, are moody and nervous, who have headache, hot flashes and dizzy spells probably have high blood pressure and don't realize it.

Norma is not a cure-all but it does reduce high blood pressure and for that purpose is used by many women at the changing time of life.

Bennett's drug store or any high class druggists will supply you with NORMA.

French China Plant Will Be Enlarged

Sebring, March 29. The French China pottery is going to expand and the work will begin at once. The plant is to be enlarged to make room for four new decorating kilns which will be built at once.

The new addition will be of considerable size and will be of brick and stone.

Work at the plant is crowding the workmen to the limit and the added decorating kilns will be of great assistance to an enlarged output.

FRAMES HARMONIZE WITH FURNISHINGS

The two attractive mirrors shown here are made by covering old mirror frames with shirtings of some material which harmonizes with one's room furnishings. The lower one of black velvet is rich enough for any living room. It has a cord of black satin next to the mirror and a corded ornament and tassel at the top. The oval one has flowered cretonne or plain sateen stirred over the frame.

FIERY, ITCHING SKIN IS QUICKLY SOOTHED WITH THIS SULPHUR

Mentho-Sulphur, a pleasant cream, will soothe and heal skin that is irritated or broken out with eczema; that is covered with ugly rash or pimples, or is rough or dry. Nothing subdues fiery skin eruptions so quickly, says a noted skin specialist. The moment this sulphur preparation is applied the itching stops and after two or three applications, the eczema is gone and the skin is delightfully clear and smooth. Sulphur is so precious as a skin remedy because it destroys the parasites that cause the burning, itching or distasteful eczema right up. A small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur may be had at any good drug store.

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HAIR

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store, all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

LEGAL NOTICE

IDA FRITCHMAN, Phoenix, Ariz.
You will take notice that on the 15th day of March, 1933, William H. Derr, as guardian of Emma Derr, filed in the Probate Court of Columbiana county, Ohio, a petition, the object and prayer of which was to produce said court to order the sale of the real estate of the said Emma Derr, situated in the county of Columbiana, Ohio, and described as follows, to-wit:

Known as part of the Ivey farm and beginning at the northeast corner of the southeast quarter of section 34, township 10, range 4, thence south with section line 11 chains and 73 1/2 links to a stone, thence due west 12 chains and 12 1/2 links to the land of Beat Street, thence north 11 chains and 78 1/2 links to the quarter section line; thence east on said line 12 chains and 12 1/2 links to the place of Beat Street, containing 18.26 acres, being the same premises conveyed by Joshua Cameron to James D. Derr by deed dated September 18, 1885, recorded in Vol. 140, page 268 of the Columbiana County Deed Records.

The application therefore will be for hearing by said court on the 29th day of April, 1933, at 9:30 o'clock a. m., at which time unless you show cause to the contrary, an order will be granted as prayed for in said petition.

RENEW FIGHT FOR ANGLERS LICENSE

Gov. A. V. Donahey's veto of the fisherman's license bill will be bitterly fought by members of the Columbiana County Fish and Game association. It became known following a meeting Thursday night in East Liverpool.

A campaign of letter-writing to members of the legislature will be waged at once with the purpose in view of bringing the proposal up again.

The barrage will be directed against those members who voted against the bill, asking them to change their votes.

The governor vetoed the measure on the ground that he believed it would throw a burden upon the men who wished for a day's occasional fishing. Proponents of the bill sought additional revenue with which to stock fish hatcheries and game preserves.

Lauds American Colleagues.

"America is ahead of Europe in brain and nerve surgery and the American surgeons work with remarkable skill and precision." Thus speaks Einar Key, head physician of the Mario hospital in Stockholm, and one of Sweden's best known surgeons, upon returning from a three months' trip to the United States, where he had visited leading hospitals and observed the work of the most eminent surgeons.

While in America Doctor Key lectured at a medical congress arranged by the American College of Surgeons in Boston. He visited large clinics in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Cleveland, Baltimore, Syracuse and other places. He declares that American hospitals have better laboratory facilities than those in Europe, while he finds the Swedish hospitals, as a rule are brighter and more cheerful than those of America.

Young Woman Leaps 100 Feet To Death

Cleveland, March 30.—An unidentified woman, aged about 24, jumped from the Rocky river bridge to her death 100 feet below today. Her body, the features marked in a position, landed on the rocky shore of the river. Two pedestrians who saw the suicide made a vain attempt to reach her as she climbed the bridge railing.

Stotesbury's Kin In Slaying Case

Here, on the sands at Palm Beach, Fla., are Edward T. Stotesbury, multi-millionaire Philadelphia banker, and his daughter, Mrs. John Keeney Mitchell, with her daughter, Frances. It has been revealed that Mitchell, Stotesbury's son-in-law, was the "heavy sugar daddy" of Dorothy Keenan King, model, who was slain in her New York apartment. He the last man believed to have seen her alive. Mitchell was known to the model as "Marshall."

MACK'S ATHLETICS THINK THIS WILL BE THEIR SEASON

Mathews In Outfield, Hale In Infield, To Provide Additional Punch.

Montgomery, Ala., March 30.—The Philadelphia Athletics, after threatening to make trouble in 1921 and 1922 without carrying the matter as far as fulfillment, are just about ready to step. They feel that this is to be their year.

That is the training camp outlook. Connie Mack stands pat on his pitchers and catchers, and has added powerful offensive strength without weakening his defense. He feels that if he gets the pitching he could muster last year, he will win many ball games that then escaped his lean clutch.

The additional punch in the offense is expected to be furnished by Mathews in the outfield and $75,000 Sam Hale in the inner works. Mathews, who was Milwaukee's rabbit lead-off man last year, is booked to play center field in the Mackian combination. "Bing" Miller is a fixture, probably in right field. Miller hit .36 last season and Mathews called a .333 average.

Left field will be disputed by Tilly Walker, Frank Welch and Frank McGowan. Walker has been in the league for 12 years and was runner-up to Ken Williams for home run honors in 1922 but failed to make the .300 mark. He may, therefore, be ousted from left field by either Welch or McGowan and the latter, on the strength of his stellar performances with the Newark Internationals in 1921 appears to have the better chance.

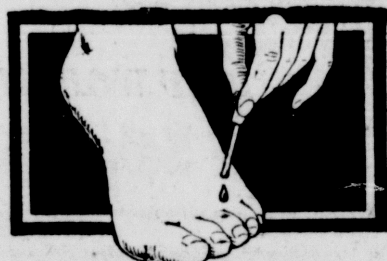

Carries Six Infielders
Walter French, football star at West Point, is also making a heroic bid for the job. French was a renowned hitter with the semi-pros in South Jersey and has shown marvelous speed down here.

Mack will carry six infielders. Joe Haner, Jimmy Dykes and Chick Galloway are fixtures at first, second and shortstop respectively and Sam Hale and Harry Riconda will battle it out for third base. Heine Scheer will be the Safety man for infield emergencies.

Hale's fame with Portland of the Pacific Coast league, where he hit .558 makes him the favorite for the hot corner. Riconda stood even higher among the hitters in his particular league and is a fighting, aggressive ball player.

Offensively, Mack can figure on three infielders and two outfielders who stood high up in the 300 class last year. His catching staff of Per-

BIDDY SHAWN

By JANE GORDON

Dean Travers entered diffidently his own living room and sank into a chair. Dean, successful man of business, never quite got over a sense of diffidence in his Scotch housekeeper's proximity. Mrs. Cameron had been with Dean since his mother's time, and was so capable in her home-making, the bachelor of the old family home grew into a sort of resigned submission.

Mrs. Cameron was always having trouble with her cooks, due, Dean thought, to her aggressiveness.

Tonight, after a trying day, he dreamed her off-repeated tale of discouragements. A letter lay on the table from Bob. He read it beneath the evening light and smiled. It was so like the impulsive lovable friend of past college days. "Now, when" Dean asked himself, "did I unburden to Bob regarding our help problem?"

Bob had written briefly: "Am sending Biddy Shawn on to you. She has been with the Ellises Biddy is a dandy little cook; have her make some of her whipped-cream cake. I'll be along to spend the next week end with you."

"I suppose," Dean remarked, breaking the news later to his housekeeper, "that Bob bribed Biddy to leave the Ellises and come on to us in our need."

"Biddy Shawn!" said Mrs. Cameron contemptuously—"Irish."

Dean, returning from his business trip some days later was met by a smiling housekeeper. "Now, don't be making a noise," she admonished, "for Biddy had a headache and I coaxed her to rest a bit."

Dean stared. "You mean the new cook?" he inquired. "You like her then?"

"Like her?" Mrs. Cameron's tone was indignant. "Will you tell me now, why I should not like the sweet young thing?"

"I am glad," he said lamely, "that she is satisfactory in her work."

The housekeeper was reticent. "Young folks can't be expected to know how to do everything," she said. "Biddy does dust furniture beautiful. And her cream cake—why, we've had cream cake every day."

Dean turned perplexedly into the living room. He glanced toward the open piano, his music scattered over its case.

"Who," he asked curiously, "has been playing?"

The housekeeper, on her way to the kitchen, looked back rebelliously. "Biddy's been playing," she said, "that's who."

After dinner Dean went into the kitchen. He had heard during his meal a merry stream of chatter from that direction. When he reached the kitchen Mrs. Cameron was not there, but the new maid sat, her back toward him, in a companionable rocking chair. Her dark hair against the wicker was softly wavy and when she turned Dean was aware at last, of the Irish eyes he had so often read about—deep blue eyes, rubbed in with the proverbial smutty finger. The maid wore a neat blue dress with a white broad collar; her cheeks were pink. At his approach she jumped up to make him an old-fashioned courtesy; it was a graceful courtesy, but Dean flushed uncomfortably at the homage.

"I hear," he said, embarrassed, "that you and Mrs. Cameron are getting along nicely together."

"Yes sir, thank you, sir," demurely answered Biddy.

She waited table thereafter most winsomely. Dean also was treated to her delicious creation of cream cake. When he returned from the office one evening he was pleased, rather than disapproving, to find the maid at the piano. She was playing, with a touching lilt, some Irish song which she explained her father had taught her.

As time passed Dean grew to long for evenings at home. Biddy's graceful presence there was strangely comforting.

Bob's mother had married again when he was but a lad at school. There was no one left now but a little half-sister who had spent much of her life at various schools. Bob kept a sort of guardianship over Clarice, the sister, while her father was obliged to be a great part of the time abroad.

Bob breezed into his friend's home one evening. "Couldn't make it sooner," he explained. "Hope you have not been troubled with Biddy. You see, I thought Mrs. Cameron would not mind making her comfortable until after this trip of mine was over. Promised to show the little girl the big city."

Dean sat up straight. "What are you talking about?" he said.

Bob began all over again, patiently.

"About my little sister, Clarice—of course I call her 'Biddy' just for fun. Shawn is such an Irish name, Biddy just fits it. She'd been entertained by the Ellises and I promised her that before she goes back to her father's apartment in California, I'd take her around New York. So I sent her here 'til I could come. What the deuce is the matter with you, Dean?"

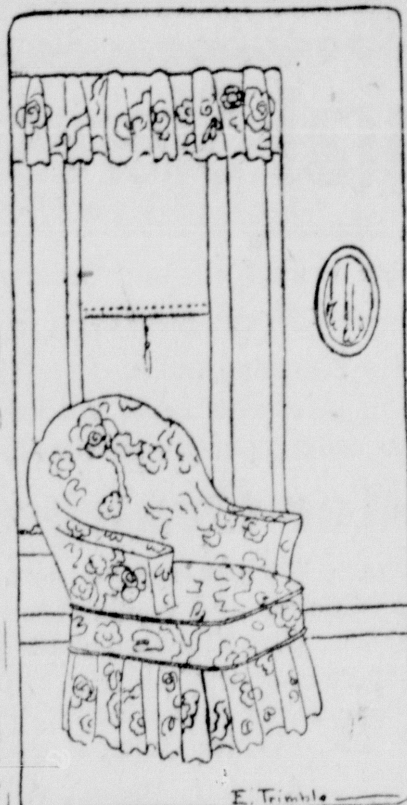

"What must you think of me?" was the troubled question that Dean later asked the smiling "Biddy Shawn."

"I don't think I will tell you," she merrily answered. "You are a rather conceited person as it is."

But she did tell him—just one week afterward; and that was when Dean asked his friend's sister to be his wife.

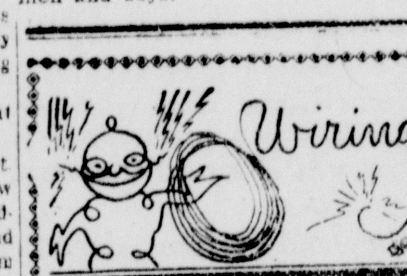

"It was the cream cake that did it," she said. "You have heard of the way to a man's heart, Dean?"

GLADDEN LANE

By JANE JORDON

Across the stage of the brilliantly lighted theater Clotilde danced her way each night into public favor.

She seemed to float as a bit of thistledown, her fairy toes scarce touching the floor, her white draperies light as filmy cloud.

Her admirers came to call her "Thistledown," and later, when her sharp tongue discouraged their attentions, they changed it grimly to "Thistle."

The dancing girl was devoted to her art and seemed to lose herself in it completely. Her young dancing mother before her, had named the baby daughter Clotilde, after a favorite heroine of fiction.

Clotilde did not remember her mother, orphaned and ignored by her father's family, she had been carried on by her mother's friends in the theatrical profession until skillful enough to earn her own living.

She had been "famous" for just one year, she told the ardent young man who at last won Clotilde's affection.

From the first night that his delighted eyes had witnessed "Thistle's" marvelous dancing, Stanley Spencer, member of an old and wealthy family, was to be seen again and again in the same box at the theater. This faithful admiration at first attracted the girl's interest, and later, led to his presentation.

And from ardent admirer Stanley Spencer became acknowledged lover.

Then came the tragedy of the accident. The audience, wild with its applause of her graceful flying exit, could not know that their favorite lay at that moment suffering at the foot of the steep stair which led to her dressing room in the theater. Clotilde had missed her footing and had fallen to the hard floor below.

When weeks later the surgeons pronounced her sufficiently recovered to be discharged from their hospital care, it was made known that "Thistle" would no more delight her audiences and because of the lamed hip, she must walk forever with the aid of a crutch. So came to an end the short-lived glory. And with that glory vanished Stanley Spencer's professed love.

Clotilde could hardly grasp this cruel realization of her second loss. But when her desolation could no longer be doubted she went to her lawyer, and smiling bravely, asked: "How much money have I?"

She had been wise in saving; there would be quite enough for her support. Then she followed the surgeon's advice and went into the country—an unexplored land to the former dancer. There day by day she grew into new and peaceful pleasures. The pleasures came through the chance direction of a sympathetically interested lady who, seeing the lame girl pass her home each day, made a point of becoming acquainted with the lonely young person. Soon they were confidants.

"My dear," the lady of the stone house said to Clotilde, "you have known misfortune, but, oh, there are so many unfortunate. When I go down Gladden lane my heart yearns to relieve the want there. My son and I have many charities; he gives freely his labor to Gladden lane, which means a great deal to one as busy doctor."

Thereafter, Mily, Clotilde in her walking wandered down Gladden lane. Gladden?—the mockery of the name! Tumbledown farm houses, shabby children—if she might only gladden their lives.

A dark-eyed little girl gazed curiously at her crutch. Clotilde smiled. The child came close. "You may lean on me as you walk," she invited. "I am strong." An old lady, a real old-fashioned lady of long ago, smiled too as Clotilde went on, leaning gratefully against the shoulder of the "strong little girl."

"I found gladness for myself there," she later told her new friend of the stone house. "It is so pleasant to make people happy with mere money. There was a poor old lady and a little girl they call Midge. It will be easy to settle them in a village home here together, and when I wish to claim relatives, why I shall come to my adopted mother—and my little girl."

To her doctor son that evening Clotilde's new friend expressed the sentiment of those theatrical friends of the past.

"With her strange bringing up," remarked Doctor Burns' mother, "the lame girl, who was a dancing girl, is the sweetest, truest creature. You must know her, John."

That John did come to know Clotilde is evidenced by the fact of Stanley Spencer's chance call upon his former college companion.

Stanley Spencer, ringing the doctor's bell, was breathlessly astonished to be confronted by the same round, glowing face that had so captivated his fancy during the lights of a theatrical stage.

"You!" Stanley Spencer exclaimed. "I," Clotilde happily informed him, "am Doctor Burns' wife."

A Wholesome Resemblance. "I never loved I was any worse than the average gent," disgruntled said Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, "but every time one of the children cuts up wife yells at him. You're just like your Paw!" And there's fourteen of the little cusses, each with his special brand of devilment.—Kansas City Star.

IDEAL HOME IN HER MIND

After All, Lover of Romance Had More Satisfactory Existence Than Had Her Successful Rivals.

Gloria was very, very sentimental; she spelled Romance with a capital; she dreamed day and night of Love, Home, Husband and Children.

She was twenty when she first met her first ideal, but he proved much more mercenary than he seemed, for he married her best friend who was very, very rich. Gloria's heart, however, was caught in the rebound a year later when she met her second ideal. He was rather older than she and liked intellectual girls, which is the only way to explain his marrying her chum, who was very, very clever.

By this time Gloria's twin sisters were quite grownup. One was very, very beautiful and the other had a very daring, dashing style, and they married Gloria's third and fourth ideals.

Once more Gloria tried to make her dreams come true, but when she found her fifth ideal preferred her cousin, who had what is known as charm, she decided to abandon the chase, and from that time on she devoted her life to writing realistic stories. She wrote of Love that was real and lasting; she created Homes where the servant question was unknown; she had a new husband whenever she desired without the formality of a divorce; and her children did exactly as they should without any tiresome study of Child Culture.

Altogether she had a much more satisfying and satisfactory existence than any of the wives of her five ideals.—Katherine Negley in Judge.

CLOTH NOW MADE FROM IRON

Said to Look as if Woven From Horse-Hair—Limestone Wool That Cannot Be Burned.

In childhood days we read of beautiful princesses who dressed in cloth of gold. Now we have cloth of iron!

Iron cloth is used for making the collars of coats set in the fashionable manner. It is manufactured from steel wool by a new process, and looks as though it had been woven from horse-hair.

Wool which was never on the back of a sheep is being used in Europe for making men's suits. It goes by the name of limestone wool, and is made in an electric furnace.

Powdered limestone, mixed with a certain chemical, is thrown into a furnace and, after passing under a furious blast of air, is tossed out as fluffy white wool. After coming from the furnace the wool is dyed and finally made into lengths of cloth.

A pair of trousers or a coat made from this material cannot be burned or damaged by grease, and is as flexible as cloth made from the wool of sheep.

Sea Mud as Building Material.

Utilization of sea mud as a building material in southeastern France is reported by Consul W. W. Brunswick, at La Rochelle. Vast stretches of mud are uncovered at low tide along the coasts of the Charente-Inférieure department and recently, according to Consul Brunswick, a local contractor made an analysis of the mud and found that it contained silica, aluminum, limestone and oxide of iron, all elements in the manufacture of hydraulic cement, bricks and blocks.

By the addition of fine sea mud it was shown that the swelling of the hydraulic lime or natural cement was reduced and the time of the initial and final set was prolonged, assuring the imperviousness of the product and increasing the resistance of the mixture. The sea mud has to undergo simple mechanical and thermal treatments before using.

Maddening!

There had been a heavy fall of snow during the night, and as soon as it was light Grimpsom crept downstairs and set to work to clear it from the front of his house. He worked hard for an hour and a half, and when he went to business he chuckled at the thought of the pleasant surprise for his wife.

When he returned in the evening his wife said: "That man did his work remarkably well this morning. There wasn't a bit of snow left when he had finished."

"What man?" asked Grimpsom. "The man you engaged to clear away the snow. He had just finished when I came down. I gave him a quarter. Was that right, dear?"

Grimpsom did not speak for some minutes, and when he did his wife got up and left him to have it out with himself.

Culligan and Stephen Culligan; offering, song, "Praise the Risen King," school; silent prayer.

FIRST CHRISTIAN

Devotional will open at 6 a. m. Easter day in this church with a sunrise prayer service of one hour at which Miss Addie Bonsall will preside. Prayer offerings, the singing of hymns and a soprano solo, "The Prayer Perfect," by Miss Gertrude Mellott comprise the program.

Decision day will be observed Easter Sunday. Church school opens at 9:45 and at this time those wishing to make the confession will be received by the pastor, Rev. H. L. Miller. At the communion service Rev. Mr. Miller will give a sermonette, "Immortality." The choir will sing one anthem, "In the Garden of the Lord" (Herbert J. Lacey) and J. J. Lord will sing a bass solo, "Open the Gates of the Temple" (Knopp). Miss Altha Wagner, organist, will give special selections for the prelude, offertory and postlude.

At 7:30 p. m. the choir will sing Ira B. Wilson's cantata, "My Redeemer Lives," under the direction of J. J. Isensee, choir leader. The entire service will be devoted to this musical program: "Night May Be Dark," opening chorus, choir; "Behold the Lamb of God," mezzo soprano solo and choir response, Miss Phoebe P. Nichols; "I'll Be Lifted Up," chorus; "Joy Cometh in the Morning," soprano and alto duet, Mrs. R. D. Painter and Mrs. J. O. Briggs; "Very Early in the Morning," solo and women's chorus; J. J. Isensee and Miss Ruth Isensee; "Behold, There Was a Great Earthquake," chorus.

"Fear Not Ye," tenor solo, W. P. Davis; "He Is Risen," tenor and bass duet and choir; "Where, Grave, Is Thy Victory?" choir and soprano obligato, Mrs. L. B. Harris; "I Know That My Redeemer Lives," soprano solo, Miss Gertrude Mellott; "Christ The Lord Is Risen," choir; "Lo, I Am With You Always," bass solo, C. H. Coburn; "Alleluia," finale, choir.

FIRST METHODIST

At the First Methodist Episcopal church the following excellent program will be given at 7:30 p. m. Sunday:

Organ prelude, "Marche Triumphale" (Paulkes), Miss Florence Murray; hymn 155, "Christ The Lord Is Risen Today"; prayer; anthem, "What Are These That Are Arrayed?" (Sir John Stainer); responsive reading, for the 13th Sunday; announcements; Gloria; worship in the presentation of tithes and offerings; offertory, "Song of Spring" (Longo), Miss Murray; anthem, "Alleluia, He Arose" (Macfadden); solo, "Angels Rolled the Rock Away" (Scott), J. William Pilson.

Anthem, "O For a Closer Walk With God" (Foster); hymn 162, "Hail the Day That Sees Him Rise" (Charles Wesley); anthem, "Christ Is Risen" (Sir John Stainer); solo, "Hosanna" (Granier), Miss Mary McInnes; anthem, "Fling Wide the Gates," from "The Crucifixion" (Stainer); hymn 171, "Hail, Thou Once Despised Jesus" (John Bakewell) benediction; moments of devotion; illuminated cross; Miles Lane; postlude, From the Symphony.

ENGAGEMENT "RING" OF SILK

Pretty Custom Which Obtains in Japan When Young People Have Made a Definite Choice.

In Japan there are many simple and sweet customs. The Japanese are a nation of lovers of romance and symbolism. Simplicity of thought and delicacy of feeling add to the charm and beauty of their many truly artistic customs.

Even in love affairs and in courtships this same sweet simplicity is observed. The thought is not lost in complicating realities and expense.

The young man does not have to save up so he can perhaps spend more money than he should to give his fiancée an engagement ring, because in Japan they do not wear engagement rings.

Instead, after a girl has promised to marry the man of her choice he proudly goes to the best shop where the finest silks are sold. Here, with great care, he selects a beautiful piece of silk and carries it lovingly to the girl of his heart.

With this silk the newly engaged girl makes a sash and wears it triumphantly. This is her engagement "ring."

VOTES AGAINST HIGHWAY PROBE

Senate Majority Holds an Investigation Unnecessary.

TAXATION BILLS PUT THROUGH

Albaugh and Robison Measures Approved by the Senate and Are Now Before the Governor—Bill Aimed at Private and Parochial Schools Killed in Committee—Senators Exonerated in Legislative Probe.

Columbus, March 28.—There will be no legislative inquiry into conditions connected with highway construction in Ohio, the state senate having rejected by a vote of 24 to 7 to sanction such an investigation.

A resolution providing for a highway inquiry, introduced early in the session by Senator Gifford of Toledo, Republican, was resurrected from the highways committee by a motion of Senator Adair of Wayne county. Called up under special order the resolution was condemned by Republican leaders as unnecessary and as an assumption by the senate of duties belonging to the governor.

The principal argument by the Republicans was to the effect that the object of the Democratic senators in pressing action on the resolution was to investigate the director of highways, a Davis holdover appointee. Three of the affirmative votes were cast by Republicans. They were Gifford, author of the resolution; Bender of Cleveland and Burke of Elyria. The other votes in favor of a probe were cast by the Democrats.

The Taft taxation bill was passed by the Ohio senate and now goes to the governor, having been approved by the house previously. The measure received but four dissenting votes, those of Senators Bragg, Ferguson, Adair and Garver, all Democrats. It proposes reclassification of the present tax laws and raises the limitations to 27 mills in cities and villages and lowers it to 14 mills in districts outside municipalities.

The Albaugh bill, providing for a county tax board and appointive tax assessors, was endorsed by the senate. The vote was 27 to 7.

The Robinson tax bill, increasing penalties for failure to list property for taxation, or to fail to do so properly, also was passed by the senate. The new penalty is 10 per cent of the valuation of the property, while the existing penalty is 50 per cent of the tax due. This bill also had been approved by the house.

The proposed law of Representative Charles Brenner of Cuyahoga county, barring private and parochial schools and requiring all children from 6 to 16 years of age to attend public schools, was killed by the house schools committee.

Women prisoners who are unable to pay fines in misdemeanor cases may be sent to the Ohio reformatory at Marysville by a bill passed by the house. Men prisoners may be placed at work for the county at a rate of not less than $1.50 a day and charged for board, tools and transportation expenses. Neither men nor women may be released by county commissioners unless the prosecuting attorney and trial judge agree. The bill was defended by its author, Representative Finebeck, Stark county, who said it was aimed at bootleggers who "hide behind the skirts of women."

Opponents of the 8-hour day law received their second defeat in the house during the present legislative session when the bill by Representative Ault of Morrow county was defeated. Ault, who is a road contractor, proposed to abolish the 8-hour law as it relates to road and bridge construction outside municipalities. A similar bill by Representative Brown of Champaign county was defeated six weeks ago.

House leaders are aiding a movement looking to sine die adjournment of the assembly at the end of the active session now drawing to a close, and unless there is to be a recurrence of the 1921 break between house and senate over the question of adjournment it is not improbable that when the solons go home after their proposed post-recess session, now tentatively set for mid-April, the state may have a "legislative rest" until January, 1925. Harmony existing between the two branches of the assembly has been marked, to date, but in view of the fact that both houses contain members who participated in the squabble of two years ago, the entente cordiale might be disrupted again if the disagreement attains the proper degree of fervor.

In arguing for sine die adjournment, some of the house leaders aver that such a course would meet with the approval of the people of Ohio. The reaction of senate leaders to the house plan will be watched with interest. Should there be another inter-house fight such as developed two years ago, the majority will be in a worse position than it was at that time, since a Democratic governor would be given a chance to prorogue the assembly rather than one of its own party.

The senate adopted a joint resolution providing that the active work of the present session shall cease on Saturday, March 31, when a recess will be taken until April 29, when the legislature will return for a day or two to complete unfinished business. Members declared they would not work all night Saturday night and into Easter Sunday morning, and indications are that the clocks would be set back and Saturday's session continued on Monday and possibly Tuesday of next week.

The Brown bill, providing for a 2-cent tax on gasoline, was tabled in the house. This means that the bill is dead for this session of the legislature. With the bill went a proposed amendment cutting the tax to 1 cent. Earlier by a vote of 45 to 32 the house, meeting as a committee of the whole, had agreed to the 1-cent proposal, but by a vote of 44 to 47 the report of the committee of the whole was rejected.

The vote on the 1-cent measure in committee indicated that a 1-cent tax could not pass the house. It was for this reason that the committee's report was rejected.

Representative John T. Brown of Champaign county, author of the bill, had an amendment to cut the auto license tax in two. He did not get to offer this. After the committee's report was rejected the house took up the pending amendment of Representative Calvert and on motion of Representative Herbert the amendment was tabled, carrying with it the bill. Earlier the house had refused to take out an amendment by Representative Atkinson, Franklin county, requiring all filling stations to have pumps with glass containers.

The senatorial inquiry into scandal rumors in connection with Senate Bill 162, which would limit liability of hotel keepers for losses incurred by guests, ended without the disclosure of anything to the discredit of any member of the senate. As a result Senators J. J. Rowe and L. L. Marshall both of Cleveland, whose names have been connected with the rumors, stand exonerated.

The report of the probing committee, which will formally absolve Rowe and Marshall of any blame, probably will not be made for several days. Senators Burch, Gardner and Garver, who constitute the committee, stated it was their intention to keep the report pending on the chance that further evidence might develop. List of witnesses whose names had been connected with the bill, however, has been exhausted and there is little likelihood there will be any further hearings.

That the committee regarded both Rowe and Marshall as having been exonerated was clearly indicated when both senators were summoned to testify, for by law witnesses before such committees are given immunity from prosecution except for perjury.

The right of a board of county commissioners to amend its assessment ruling and include additional property as taxable for road improvement is involved in a case from Clermont county which the supreme court decided to hear.

A number of residents of the county protested an amendment widening the scope of taxable property from abutting property to property within a mile of the road to be improved. The road is a section of the Grant highway. The residents won their case in the lower courts and the county treasurer appealed to the supreme court.

In another case which the supreme court decided to review, James Masters of Carroll county contends that if a county board of education does not supply transportation to pupils living more than four miles from the school, the pupils may live in the town where the school is and charge the board of education for lodging. Masters' two children were denied transportation on account of bad roads, it is said, whereupon he sent them to Carrollton, the seat of the county high school, to live. Lower courts held that his mandamus to force the board to pay the lodging bills could not be issued, but the supreme court will decide the matter.

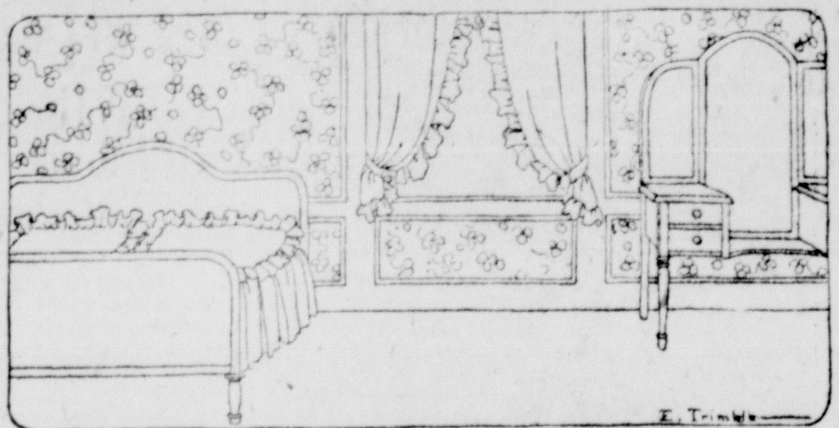

Ohio's exhibit at the National Prison congress in Washington was by far the best which was made by the seven states represented with exhibits, according to W. I. Bishop, chief clerk at the penitentiary, and J. E. Clark, manager of sales and manufacturing in the department of public welfare, who have just returned from Washington.

So much attention was attracted to the Ohio showing of prison-made products that several of the articles taken to the show were disposed of to other states where they will be used for pattern purposes. The state of Virginia purchased several pieces of furniture made at Mansfield.

Ohio led because of the diversity of articles manufactured behind prison walls, Minnesota, which manufactures binder twine which is offered on the open market, led in the showing of profits from prison-made goods.

An effort is to be made by the Prison congress to have laws passed which will legalize the interchange of prison-made products conducted between states. At the present time, Ohio can not dispose of any of its prison-made products except to municipalities of the state, and to other state-operated institutions.

DO NOT USE TOO MUCH CRETONNE IN A ROOM

Cretonnes are good, but do not overdo them is the advice of the interior decorators. In a room with a figured wall covering or a patterned rug, even a very attractive cretonne strikes a wrong note. The room shown in the sketch affords a very pleasing effect gained by using a chintz patterned paper hung in panels, white ruffled curtains and ivory woodwork and furniture. A taupe carpet covering the entire floor is a new touch.

"Deadheads."

Deadhead is the literal translation of the Latin phrase, caput mortuum, which was much used by the old chemists to denote the residuum of chemicals when all their volatile matters had escaped; hence the word is figuratively used of anything from which all that rendered it valuable has been taken away. Spectators or passengers who do not pay are not valuable, from a revenue standpoint.

One out of every four children in America is undernourished.

HEAVY PAPER FOR UNDER CARPETS FOR SALE AT NEWS OFFICE.

The Rolling Stone

By ELLA SAUNDERS

No two boys could have been more unlike each other than Townsend and Duffield. Duffield's father was president of the National bank, and Thompson's was a corner grocer. When Thompson got a job as bank messenger Duffield was assistant cashier, making good money and spending it.

All the pretty girls in the town knew Duffield's pony trap, and, later, Duffield's car. The road houses knew Duffield. They knew him too well, thought Mary Ackroyd, who was a steady, quiet girl with strange, luminous gray eyes. She did not encourage Duffield.

When Duffield's father was involved in the financial smash, and the bank was reorganized, Duffield was quietly put out of the door. Thompson became cashier. He saved every penny, dressed neatly, and attended church every Sunday.

Duffield went to see Mary the night before he left for the metropolis. Thompson was there and Duffield hung on till Thompson was forced to go. Then came Duffield's chance.

"I know I've been a fool, Mary," he said, "but give me a chance. I'll make good in New York. Will you wait?"

Mary softened a little toward the good-looking prodigal, but she promised nothing. Duffield went away.

Thompson became one of the higher officials of the bank. He was a rising man in the town. The evening came when he asked Mary to be his wife. Mary thought of the boy in New York; no one had heard of him for a long time.

"I don't love you as I'd wish to, John," she answered. "I—I don't know my own mind. Give me time."

Time was of the essence of the Thompson scheme of life. Mary could have all the time she wanted. But she only needed a month, for then the news came that Duffield was back, penniless, shabby; he had come to see his sick mother and incredible stories were in circulation about him. He drank, he had thrown up or lost position after position.

He came to see Mary. "I know I've been a waster," he said, "but I've never had my chance. I'm not cut out for a humdrum life. Wait a while, Mary."

But he received scant encouragement. The atmosphere of the town had been all about Mary ever since girlhood; Thompson's praises were being sung everywhere. Duffield went away, and six months later Mary became Thompson's bride.

For years no news was heard of Duffield. Thompson was now president of the National bank. He had a fine house in the suburbs. Mary found out too late what life could mean. She bore with the cold formality of it, her husband's humdrum, calculated ways and cold selfishness, but often against her will she found herself thinking of the good-looking prodigal who had gone out of her life.

Thompson fell sick with a mysterious ailment. He was ill three years, helpless toward the end. Mary nursed his assiduously. At the end Thompson said:

"I know you never loved me. It was Duffield."

Mary could not deny it. So Thompson died. And six months after the funeral Duffield came back.

He came back a middle-aged man, roughly dressed, hardened. He went to Mary.

"You know I always loved you," he said, "if you had given me a chance—"

"Oh, you were always talking about chances, Harry, but you never took one when it came," answered Mary bitterly—the more bitterly because in her heart she knew she loved him.

The town despised Duffield more than ever. He loafed at the hotel for weeks. No one knew where he got his money from. He went to Mary again:

"I'm leaving Wilbury for good," he said. "I guess I'm not wanted here. Mary, if I make good with you—will you—?"

Mary sobbed: "Oh, Harry, it's so pathetic! You came to me with that question fifteen years ago."

"Yes—yes."

"Do you love me enough to come to New York with me and help me build up my life, dear? I'm not thinking of your money. I've got a position. I can support you."

Mary looked uncertainly into the face of the man who had been the handsome boy she'd known, and her heart grew softer.

"Yes—yes, I will, Harry," she said. "I made a mistake. I should have seen love is greater than anything else. I'll go with you, Harry—to the world's end. I'll share your life. And I'll tell you something. My husband had secretly speculated; he left me nothing. I was going to ask for a position in the bank."

Duffield said: "I've been president of one of the largest New York banks for twelve years past, Mary, dear. I wanted you—just for love, you understand, that's all."

ELYRIA SENATOR GROOMS SELF FOR NEXT GOVERNOR

Burke Takes Fling At Work Of Present Session Of Ohio Legislature.

ELYRIA, March 29.—"Truth and justice compel me to say that there has been no legislation enacted during the present session of the Ohio legislature, in fact, none has passed the senate—which was opposed by any of the lobbyists of privilege, who swarmed the state house with much more potency than they did two years ago," declared Sen. J. F. Burke, Elyria, today.

Sen. Burke indicated that he may comply with the requests of his friends and as a Progressive Republican, become a candidate for the G. O. P. gubernatorial nomination next year.

"It is a little early to speak of either accomplishment or failure, as the state legislature has not yet adjourned, but, of course, its work is so nearly ended that one can speak fairly accurately," said Sen. Burke.

Good Legislation
"There has been good legislation enacted by the 85th general assembly (present session), notably the Bender and Gordon laws, for the better enforcement of prohibition and the Farnsworth law, to make more effective the movement for co-operative selling by the farmer.

"No effort was put forth by the lobbyists of privilege against the prohibition enforcement acts, the farmer acts, or those affecting school work. Organized greed either has been forced to keep hands off of these, or else concludes that the spoils are not worth the effort.

"On the other hand," continued Sen. Burke, "in two things, the political organizations of the senate and, in a lesser degree, the house, have shown a very sensitive response to the wishes of the representatives of privilege.

"No law of any moment whatever has been enacted on behalf of the wage earner during this session. None at all has been passed, whether of moment or not, which has been opposed by representatives of the manufacturers' association, the railroads or other special interests," declared Sen. Burke.

TOMORROW AT NINE

By GAIL F. WHITEHOUSE

WILSON TO BACK
JUSTICE CLARK
FOR PRESIDENT

Peter McGilvery closed the front door and limped upstairs to his room. From the living room below the voice of Peter, Sr., ascended to the ears of Peter, Jr., with unpleasant distinctness.

"Aw, ma, stop worrying about that kid!" (Peter, Sr., always addressed Mrs. McGilvery as "Ma," although Peter, Jr., deplored the habit as exceedingly provincial.) "Don't you s'pose I know what's best for him?"

Peter, Jr., didn't stop to listen. He was gloomily resigned. Tomorrow at 9 he would enter upon an ignominious career in the office of McGilvery & Johns, manufacturers of Corvina hair nets.

With gloomy precision Peter closed his bedroom door and locked it. He limped across the room, seated himself with dignity on the bed, and removed from his abused feet a pair of resplendent oxfords. Still limping a trifle, he crossed to the dresser, halted before its mirror, and studied with utmost solemnity the visage reflected therein. Presently he lifted his right eyebrow very slightly, imparting to his nineteen-year-old countenance an expression of extreme sophistication.

For fully half a minute Peter retained this expression, then, extracting from an upper drawer a well-worn copy of Filmland, he opened that worthy magazine to page six, whereon was depicted Montgomery Trellys, famous interpreter of bored young millionaires roles.

With the aid of a clothes brush Peter propped the open magazine against the mirror, and, with a gesture of utter boredom, raised an imaginary cigarette to his lips and blew imaginary rings of smoke ceilingward.

For an instant, as he thus regarded himself, the gloom on Peter's face lifted. And then he remembered "Wasted!" he informed the youth in the mirror. "Wasted!"

He glanced at his wrist watch. It was quarter after seven. Hastily he grabbed up the new oxfords and forced his protesting feet into them. Twenty minutes later he was occupying a 20-cent seat in the Bloomtown Picture Palace.

The title of the feature picture, "Out of the Darkness," a super-super picture with Montgomery Trellys, was being flashed on the screen. With great concentration Peter pretended that he was the great Montgomery, reviewing his latest release.

On the screen, Montgomery Trellys was smoking numerous cigarettes and spending his millionaire father's dollars on late parties for chorus girls. At the end of the second reel he has reached the conclusion that women bore him dreadfully and refuses to buy them any more diamond necklaces. And then he discovers his father's stenographer!

Right here Peter became tremulous. He was aware that the little Somebody at his left was looking at him. (On the screen Montgomery Trellys was looking masterfully down upon the lovely stenographer.) Drawing a long breath, Peter turned and looked straight down into the upturned face of the owner of the little feet in the low-heeled pumps.

At that moment there was no past, no future, just a wonderful present, with a dim little face turned up to his.

A small, scared voice sounded in Peter's left ear. "I think it's splendid, don't you?"

Manfully Peter mustered his powers of speech. "I'll say he is!" His voice sounded embarrassingly squeaky. "He's my favorite," confided the voice, courageously.

"Mine, too," said Peter.

"I think he looks like you."

Again there was silence, a rather thrilling silence, with organ accompaniment. "Out of the Darkness" was drawing to its "lived-happy-ever-after" ending. "Out of the darkness into the light," said Montgomery Trellys.

Simultaneously Peter and the little Somebody looked at each other with awed eyes.

"Look," said Peter, "can't we—can't you let me call, or something. Honest, I never felt this way before."

"Neither did I," admitted the small voice close to his left ear.

"Can I see you tomorrow afternoon?" You see, Peter had quite forgotten what was going to happen tomorrow.

"Can't," whispered the voice.

"Work."

"Jimmy! Honest?" Peter was stunned! She was so little and adorable. "Where do you work, d-dear?"

The "dear" was inaudible.

"Downtown." She fixed her attention demurely upon her shiny pumps. "McGilvery and Johns. I'm Mr. McGilvery's stenographer."

Peter grinned down at her rapturously. "Bet you don't know who I am," he gloated.

"E—Bet I do," she stuttered. "Your father told me all about you."

They parted on the steps of a Park avenue bungalow. "Tomorrow at 9," said Peter, in the most masterful manner.

"Tomorrow at 9," whispered the palest girl in the world.

At that moment up in Peter's room, the clothes brush which had acted as prop to the magazine on the dresser slipped over, and "Filmland" fell to the floor with a little thud.
